Sloan and Snow floated boats
in the pond.
Snow got soaked.

A ball came by.
"May I play?" Sloan asked.
"You're not grown up enough,"
Dave claimed.

"I'm the coach," called Joan.
"Can you kick?"
Sloan showed her his best kick.
Joan said, "Play back here."

Sloan roamed back and forth.
The wind was blowing.
The grass was growing.
Snow moaned and groaned.

Just when Sloan was going,
the ball came at him. Whoa!
Sloan kicked it.

His kick was low and not slow.
Sloan pumped his arm. Yes!
The ball had flown into the goal.

"A goal!" yelled Dave.
"You don't need to grow!"
"I'll score two in a row,"
Sloan crowed.
